Admiral, a brand of The Italian Sea Group, announced on the 30th March the sale of a new build 63m superyacht alongside Alex Banning of SuperYachtsMonaco, who was representing the Buyer.

The superyacht reflects the owner's exacting requirements and will provide a balance of Italian design, flair, creativity and style, reflecting the owner's requests.

Admiral and the buyer's team were tasked to produce the pinnacle of 20 years of superyacht ownership and following a year long process of design and development, Admiral announce yet another experienced superyacht owner choosing their shipyard.

Built to Lloyd's class, this superyacht is to be delivered in 2019. The new build project will be managed by Superyacht Technical Services, the owner's team, alongside SuperYachtsMonaco and Admiral's experienced and dedicated in-house resources.

Francesco Carbone, vice chairman of The Italian Sea Group commented, "We are extremely satisfied to have made an agreement with the owner to build a yacht for such an immensely experienced and passionate yachtsman. It has been a pleasure working with Alex Banning and the whole owner's team and we look forward to the successful completion of another quality vessel".

Giuseppe Taranto, CEO of The Italian Sea Group added, "We are proud of the sale of this outstanding yacht in the same period in which we are launching three brand new Admiral yachts of 55m, 50m and 38m. We look forward to yet another quality and on time delivery. To win the contract with such an experienced and influential client is testament to Admiral as a brand and shipyard of high standards".
